Pulaski County participates in annual CED presentation
Pulaski County Archway professional Michelle Elliott and Lee Slade, President and CEO of United Pulaski and the Hawkinsville-Pulaski County Chamber of Commerce, participated in the College of Environment + Design/Archway Partnership annual exhibit and reception held on August 28 at the College’s Jackson Street Building. The exhibit features the work of undergraduate and graduate students who worked in Archway communities across Georgia this past summer. Mr. Slade addressed the group of faculty and students assembled and recognized the importance of their efforts in the community, specifically citing the work on the Lumpkin Street School project done by Jialiu Cui, Xuran Zau and Abi Phillips.

Pulaski County Economic Developer meets with UGA English class in Athens
Lee Slade, President and CEO of United Pulaski and the Hawkinsville-Pulaski County Chamber of Commerce, traveled to Athens to meet with Dr. Elizabeth Davis and her “Writing for the Web” class on August 28. Mr. Slade spoke to the group about Hawkinsville and shared with them the results of a community focus group. The students will work over the course of the semester to design a new branding strategy for the community and make recommendations about the United Pulaski and Chamber of Commerce websites. Later this month, many of the students in the class will travel to Hawkinsville to tour and get input from community members. At the end of the semester, they will return to the community to present their findings.
