Archway Partnership Hosts 21st Century Partnership
The Archway Partnership hosted retired Lt. Gen. Charlie Stenner, executive director of the 21st Century Partnership, a support and advocacy group for Robins Air Force Base, largest industrial complex in Georgia, employing a workforce of over 25,584 civilians, contractors, and military members. During his visit, Stenner met with Vice President Jennifer Frum and directors from various public service units as well as the College of Education, School of Engineering, College of Public Health and College of Pharmacy. Stenner discussed key areas of concern (crime, regional education and income diversification) in preparation of the next round of Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) Commission hearings.

Pulaski County Archway Partnership participates in regional STEM conference
On Sept. 12, the Archway Partnership participated in the RAFB STEM 2.0 conference held at the Museum of Aviation. The one day conference was designed to look for creative ways that education, industry and military partners can collaborate to encourage and inspire more interest in science and technology careers in K-12. Archway was asked to discuss models for successful collaboration and participate in a panel discussion to highlight past accomplishments in this area. The conference was attended by Sue Chapman, Michelle Elliott and TJ Kopcha.
